Discount at the Bank—Bullion in Outflow—The Solicitor Generalship.

TELEGRAMS TO THE NEW YORK HERALD. LONDON, Nov. 13, 1873. At a quarter past twelve, noon, to-day the Bank of England directors posted their card, announcing that no change had been made in the rate of discount.

BULLION. The bullion in the Bank of England has decreased $41,000 during the past week, and the amount gone into the bank on balance to-day is $22,000.

THE SOLICITOR GENERALSHIP. It is rumored that Mr. William George G. V. Harcourt, now member of Parliament from Oxford City, is to be appointed Solicitor General. (William George Granville Venables Vernon Harcourt, who is likely to be appointed Solicitor General of England, was born in the year 1827 and graduated in Trinity College, Cambridge, being senior optime in the first class in classics. He was called to the bar and made Queen's Counsel in 1866. He was professor of international law in the University of Cambridge, a member of the Royal Commission for the amendment of the Neutralty laws, and also for the amendment of the laws relating to naturalization. Mr. Harcourt is the author of the letters signed "Historica," on international law, which were published in the London Times after the escape of the Alabama during the diplomatic controversy to which the event gave rise. He is liberal in politics and a firm supporter of Mr. Gladstone's policy.—ED. HERALD.)

and will pursue the even tenor of its way according to law and precedent, there are thousands of ways by which individuals may aid, within the letter of the law, the struggling Cuban. Bodies of men and women could have done or omitted things so far as the law is concerned, which would have done or omitted things, not only of desperation, but of inability. The Cuban government has assumed the criminal responsibility of the Spanish government, and has ratched into a possible conflict for the home government. The sympathy of one of the most excitable nations in the world in behalf of its insurgent foe. It has for the moment, for the great mass of the people of the United States, taken the issue out of the domain of law and politics into that of popular sentiment and popular vengeance.

Comments of the French Press. The Courier des Etats Unis, in commenting on the despatches regarding the executions in Havana, says:—"This fatal news has thrown the whole city into a state of consternation. The butchery is regarded as a defiance to the United States, and its precipitation and barbarity are intended to inspire a profound horror, consequently in all our mercantile centres and public places there is a determination to call upon the government to demand immediate reparation and satisfaction for the mouth of everybody, and all thinking men add that such a resolution by the government would create a salutary reaction against the present situation in business and the general prosecution of affairs in the country."

The Messenger, Franco-Americanist says:—"The explanation given by Mr. Fish at the cabinet council upon the Virginia affair adds but little to the facts already known, and that according to the Secretary of State in his despatch to Cuba has not accepted the responsibility of the executions at Santiago de Cuba. It is true that our government is deprived of the precise details of this bloody drama, but Mr. Fish understood that Ryan and his unhappy companions have been shot in virtue of a former sentence rendered long anterior to the Virginia case. The Spanish government, according to the Spanish law, remained in force against the men, and it was only necessary for the Spanish government to carry it into effect. It is doubtless requisite to take into consideration the legislation of a country which now occupies the public mind; but the law which Mr. Fish speaks is certainly the unhappy Spanish law, and it is to be hoped that the republican government of Spain will do prompt justice in the premises. In any case, it required at least a public opinion in order to establish the identity of the offenders, and if it is true that the Virginia sailed under the American flag they should maintain, as we have said before, that the president of the United States should have proved to the moment when it should be judicially proved that the vessel was a pirate and fraudulently exhibited the American colors."

Comments of the German Journals. The New Yorker Staats-Zeitung maintains that "the Spanish authorities in Cuba have taken upon themselves the responsibility of these executions. From the fact that within a few hours of the death of the military leaders the naval tribunal shot not only the chief of the insurgents (Afara), but also the captain of the ship (Pry) and his whole crew, it is evident that the bloody tragedy in Cuba treated the Virginians simply as a pirate crew. This is nothing more than a piece of mere presumption, inasmuch as Spain herself has denied that the insurgents of Cuba amounted to a war party, and, therefore, their right of search cannot be based upon the right of piracy, but upon the existence of which is disclaimed, was the Virginians a pirate crew, as we learn by cable, in its number of yesterday, that the captain of the ship only object was to make a good trade and demand high prices for transporting the revolutionary party to the United States. The vessel was not under American ownership and was not entitled to protection has not been shown. She had beyond a doubt received her clearing papers from a regularly commissioned United States Consul. Supposing this to have been a mistake in placing her under the American flag and that she misused the flag, this cannot constitute a piracy, and, therefore, it is, perhaps, convenient to misuse a flag merely for the purpose of avoiding punishment, thereby outraging the States and thus rendering the case, clearly entitling the United States to the right of inflicting punishment—an additional ground why the United States should have proceeded in this manner, and it is evident that the present government of the Spanish mother country is not to be held responsible for the execution of these proceedings. It is evident that the present government of the Spanish mother country is not to be held responsible for the execution of these proceedings. It is evident that the present government of the Spanish mother country is not to be held responsible for the execution of these proceedings.

Views of the Philadelphia Press. PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13, 1873. Since the movement upon the part of the government indicates anticipation, or at least preparation, for the worst that may result from the recent atrocities in Cuba, a public opinion in this city, which is a rule as slow to take advanced opinions upon any subject whatever, notices this affair to considerable length and with, for them, extraordinary spirit.

THE PUBLIC RECORD THINKS there are several reasons for supposing that our government may be able to steer its way through the present complication without committing any serious blunder, that the Spanish government ought to unite with our own in maintaining the same as a rule of this case, and that there is no need of war.

government seems to be powerless in the matter, or in playing a diplomatic game of quaff and decanting, pressing on paper and suffering the official in Cuba. In either view of the case, the imperative duty of our government to interfere is urgent. The Spanish flag and the government of Spain to respect the flag of this nation. This practice of a few men interpreting the flag of a score of rifles in Cuba is not compatible with the character and standing of this nation. Spain, in the first place, should be taught her duty in regard to the flag of this nation, and not control the authorities of Cuba that duty should be performed by the navy of the United States. The point in view is not reached when action on the part of this nation is a national humiliation and disgrace.

Such, then, are the opinions of those few who, in this country, are to be regarded as the opinions of the people. Making into consideration the atmosphere which usually pervades the editorial rooms from which emanate the above remarks, and the fact that they are, in every respect, extraordinary.

ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE.

It is announced in Newark that President Grant and Secretary of the Navy Resoon will probably visit the industrial Exhibition to-morrow night. The invitation was forwarded several weeks ago by President Haissay. An answer has been received accepting, and Saturday has been named as the time.

As the mother of the President is now residing in Elizabeth, he will, after viewing the attractions at the Ring, repair to that city for the purpose of spending the Sabbath with her.

There is a rumor that the Spanish butchery in Cuba and the grave questions therefrom arising, may prevent the President from visiting Newark to-morrow night.

The War of 1812, the Caroline, Martin Koszta, Sir John Crampton, Greytown, Mason and Slidell Cases.

The Vengeance of Fish on Catacazy.

The war of 1812 was undertaken against England because of the repeated insults to the American flag and outrages upon our ships and citizens at sea. The impressment of American seamen by Great Britain, the searching of American ships upon the high seas, the bringing to the Chesapeake an English man-of-war Leopard, and, after pouring a series of broadsides into her, the taking from on board four seamen and a crew member.

officially sanctioned by British officials until late in June, 1855. Then the British officials, becoming suddenly aware that their directions were being carried by unscrupulous agents, who were likely to cause trouble with the United States, ordered the cessation of the recruiting. Meaning our government to be aware of the fact that the British secret agents and the connection of Minister Crampton and some British Consul officers with them. Secretary of State Marcy, through Minister Crampton, called upon the British government for condemnation of the acts of the agents, and made a vague demand for recall of British representatives here.
