Emperor William's Decision in the San Juan Case-Premier Gladstone's Idea of Peaceful Results-Russia's Acquisition in Asia-Female Emigration-Tichborne's Trial Tribulations.

TELEGRAMS TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, May 2, 1873, In the House of Commons to-night Lord George Hamilton, member for Middlesex, called attention to the nature of the reference to the treaty of 1846, which, under the Treaty of Washington, was submitted together with the Northwestern Boundary question, to the decision of the German ror. He regretted that the English government had allowed upon that part of the Oregon Treaty an interpretation fatal to the just claims of England. Rosario Strait, long after 1846, was the only known navigable channel between Oregon and Vancouver's Island, and hence was undoubt edly the channel indicated in the treaty of 1846, Yet the government, with unhappy ingenuity, ex cluded the arbitrater from the consideration of this particular channel. He found no fault with the Emperor William. He thought the Geneva arbitrators would have acted more wisely had they anticipated his method, and confined themselves to rendering their decision without giving the rea sons therefor. Lord Hamilton said he would make no motion, and only desired to obtain from the House such an expression of opinion as would discourage the making of treaties hereafter on the "give all, take nothing" principle.

Captain Ballic-Cochrane, Member for the Isle of Wight, said Earl Granville's foreign policy had been the reverse of that of Aberdeen, Palmerston, Russell and Stanley. It had recently given to Russia 500 miles of frontier in Asia. The regetiations with the United States had been pursued in accordance with the same policy of con-

Viscount Enfield Under Secretary for the Foreign Department, defended Earl Granville and vindicated the course he had taken. The Northwestern boundary question was an intricate one, and nonwas better adapted for arbitration. He traced the history of the boundary dispute, the successive ne gotiations and final settlement. As an Englishman he regretted the decision, but he cheerfully and ungrudgingly accepted it.

Hon. Percy Wyndham, member for West Cumberland, regarded the Emperor's decision as a natural one, because the concessions in the Washington Treaty excluded evidence which might have led to

Mr. Eastwick, member for Penryn, thought the government should have insisted on strict adperence to the terms of the treaty of 1846, in which the word "mid-channel" was plainly used. Viscount Bury, member for Berwick-on-Tweed, could not but feel that the Emperor's decision was a serious blow; but it would be a waste of time to reopen the negotiation. Probably arbitration would soon be required again to settle the boundary line between Alaska and British Columbia. Lord John Manners, member for North Leicester shire, said the government was unwise in consenting to restricted instead of open arbitration. Mr. Gladstone contended that restricted arbitra tion was better than none. While the English had been defeated he showed that arbitration had removed the causes of irritation and restored friend liness between two great nations. The subject was then dropped.

Imperial Visit to the Defender of Sebastopol.-Reminiscences of the Grim Fortress.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

St. Petersburg, May 2, 1873. Their Imperial Majestles the Emperor William of Germany and the Czar Alexander of Russia paid a visit last evening to General E. Ivanovitch Todleben, the defender of Sebastopol, and listened to his lecture on Sebastopol during the Crimean war.

The Future of the Famous Fortress. The question whether Sebastopol is to be made a naval as well as a commercial port was settled by the Russian government during the month of April in the present year. It has been decided to rebuild the arsenal, and also to open the harbor to trading ships: and it is hoped that the new Russian railways will greatly develop the commerce of the This point had already been settled in principle by the imperial commission, compris-ing the Ministers of War, of the Interior, of Finance and of Communications, and presided over by the Grand Duke Constantine, which was appointed to consider the question in 1871. The plans of the new fortifications of Sebastopol were decided upon by this commission, which also declared itself in favor of the town being made a trading port, leaving the details to be settled by a local commission under the presidency of Vice Admiral Arkas. The local commission has made arrangements for rebuilding the town in such a manner as to enable it to be used both for military and commercial purposes, though the latter are, as a rule, made subsidiary to the former. It is proposed that the ships-of-war shall be stationed at the most favorable point of the to go to a more shallow part of the bay. General Todieben's lecture was rendered peculiarly attrac-

The other ladies are Fraulein Maria Roller, the first violinist; Fräuein Aennehen Korn, a very handsome blonde, with large, lustrous eyes, like Christine Nilsson, dressed in a gray dress, with a cherry colored bow at her well-shaped threat: Fräulein Richard, who plays the cornet-a-piston; Fräulen Brandel, who plays the meiodeon, and Präulein Tiedmann, who performs with mingled skill and grace on

THE BIG DRUM, most powerful of all instruments. The ladies do not speak English, and their remarks, as follows, need to be interpreted :-

Fraulein AENNCHEN KORN (second violin)-I think that the account in the HERALD of the Wien exposition is most beautiful. Ach Gott ! what a great number of dollars it must have cost! a pity that the young Herr does not speak Ger-Fraulein Maria Roller (first violin, opening a Herald which lay on the table)—It is a grosse Zeitung die Herald. I will buy it every day now to hear from tiebes Deutschland. Ah ! tiebe Wien, it is a beautiful city, the city of the world.

Fraulein Schennstein (who plays the harp) -I think that the HERALD will always be loved by the German people after this. It was so kind of Mr. Bennett to let Madame Muhlbach write her charming despatch. I will read it to-night before I go to bed, and shall preserve it in my trunk and carry it to Germany when I go home.'

Frau RICHARD (cornet-A-piston and big drum) -Himmel Gott! I hope we shall have a German HERALD soon. 1 want to send all the news, and the HERALD is the only paper in which all the news can be found. The other papers are so stupid, I do not like them. You do not know what pleasure have in reading of the speech of Fürsten von Auersperg, he speaks so beautiful! THE GREAT JOURNAL.

Fraulein Brandet.-I see in all the people's hands to-night the great Zeitung, the HERALD. They take it at my boarding house and I pay four cents for it Fritatein Tiedemann (triangle) -- You must come and hear our orchestrion. We shall have much pleasure in the HERALD'S description. It always tells the truth. The Germans like the HERALD, because it goes to so much expense to give them news. My favorite author and the favorite author of all my friends is Herr Auerbach. Come again, picase, and hear the big orchestrion.

Here the reporter took his leave, as the ladies had to go on the stage to begin the second part of the evening's performance.

What Was Said on the Cars.

Exhausted by the effects of his travels around town, surjeited with the praise showered upon the paper which he represented, the reporter jumped with the agility of a well-trained acrobat upon car No. 35 of the Broadway line, and flung off from his feet the fifth that Captain Thorne's satellites ought to have carted away during the sunny nours of last week.

The conductor of this car was a wit, a satiris and one who bore all the appearance of a bon vivant. He had a sandy mustache, a blonde imperial and a corporation which an alderman might have been envious of.

"What do you think of the HERALD this morning?" queried the reporter?

CAR CONDUCTOR No. 35-Think? Every person who's come on here to-day has asked me the same question. They seem to think I'm a general sort of critic, a fellow who knows everything except the business he's paid for. Want my ideas? The thing is splendid; shows that American journalism is first class. But (confidentially) this HERALD enterprise is killing me. Why, sir, I would sooner see a fat negress, with a basket of unwashed clothing upon her arm, and who was in doubt about her des tination, get upon the car than I would a welldressed man who asks me my opinion about the German letters in the HERALD of this morning. REPORTER-You are a German, I am sure: won' you tell me something?

"DOT VATERLAND." CONDUCTOR-Yes, I am a Prussian, and I would like to be in Vienna. But what can I do; I am poor and cannot go there. Stop! Yes, mam. Right in the middle of a puddle, and what dirty stockings the old woman's got! A magnificent idea; excuse me, sir; that's only four cents. We all know ch; he's a fine writer, and Miss Muhibach is our old love. Got in Himmel. Mr. -, the HERALD is a wonderful paper. Tell me frankly-another puddle and fat female-how many men compose its regiment of correspondents?

REPORTER-Only an infantile legion. Do you drink lager ?

CONDUCTOR (with emphasis) -Yes, sir, REPORTER-Well, I'm not going to ask you to take any, because I think it bad, being a disciple of temperance; but what do you hear around the CONDUCTOR (piteously) -No beer ? Well, I'm sick of hearing. Every one is talking about the HERALD, what a great paper it is, and what grand fellows you must be upon it. As to the Vienna Exposition, I think it will be a success in time; but they charge too high a price for admission. It is only those who are rich can enter.

POOR MEN MUST WAIT. Mind that curve, sir. Yes. Won't you take a seat? I'm very tired, and, though the weather is wet. I'm dry as a desert. The reporter accepted the hint, entered the car and became an unwilling victum to the insects which ply their voracious avocations until the conveyance reached its terminus. Then he left, jubilant with the consciousness that he had done his duty, though he had not previously advertised the fact, as Nelson was in the habit of doing before his battles, or made known to the fex populi the sad fact that he was that most consummate and conscious of nuisances, the dyspeptic interviewer of a diurnal newspaper.

Brooklyn's Expression of Opinion on the Exposition Enterprise. Although the American Department of the Vienna Exposition for the display of Industry and art was "dark, barren and dingy, like an abandoned rallway town on the plains," the German-American intellectual department resident of the New World was not doomed to such obscurity, thanks to the enterprise and genius of the spirit of progress which governs the press of the North American Continent. This conclusion was fully verified by the expressions of unbounded admiration which greeted the advent of the HERALD upon every side in the precincts of the third city, in point of population, in the Union, yesterday. "Eight columns of the HERALD are printed to-day in the German language! What think you of that for enterprise regardless of cost ?" exclaimed "a native and to the manner born," within earshot of the writer, on a Court street railroad car, as he concluded the task of counting the space devoted to the Vienna Exposition, addressing himself to a companion.

"Well, sir," for my part I am not surprised at anything that that HERALD does in the way of enterprise. 'Hang expense!' appears to be the motto of the management; but news that journal will have. It is in just such 'specialties' that the HERALD has far DISTANCED ITS CONTEMPORARIES. Say what you may, one cannot claim to be up with the times—our times—who neglects to read that cosmopolitan organ at the breakfast table."

The acquaintance thus addressed acquiesced in this sentiment, and their fellow passengers, who lent close attention to the above remarks, smiled approval of their utterances.

Among the German-speaking residents of Brooklyn the feeling of proud congratulation was great recognizing the German text type running through so many long and valuable columns of space of the "Vass is dass I see?" exclaimed a stalwart Teuton, as he seized the last paper from the newsdealer's stand. "Vell, off it ain't Faderland,

"Yah, dat vas so!" cried a German at the elbow of the speaker as he cast his eye down the uniquely set up columns of double-leaded brevier. How eagerly the matter contained therein was scanned, devoured and digested by the intellectual organs of mastication can only be appreciated by the Germans themselves. Here in a far-off country, to reach which it had cost them so many nonths of toil to accumulate, so many pangs o neart at parting, so many regrets upon the severance of ties that were dear, they found themselves in the closest relationship with their fatherland through the medium of universal unison of senti ment and a refinement of appreciation thereof that can never be forgotten-the spirit which so lavishly catered to their national pride.

"DETCHTOWN," Eastern District, was fairly wild over the event. Indeed, so great was the exuberance of spirit manifested consequent upon the appearance of the HERALD in that thickly settled section of the City of Churches that the occasion was made one of impromptu carnival. The stores devoted to the to excess, and as each sentence in the tongue of fatherland was read, applause ensued, and another stoop of beer was called for. If the enterprise had proceeded from a German newspaper office not half the pride would have been experienced, but coming as it did from a journal of their adopted land, it was dear indeed.

TRISH SENTIMENT. The citizens halling from the Emerald Isle commented upon the magnificence of the conception of the genius and enterprise which prompted such a display of journalistic greatness. "Well, well," remarked a prominent citizen in official position, "this beats all ever I have seen in this way. I will keep this day's HERALD as long as I live as an example of what that paper can do. It beats all, en-

There were no dissenting voices to this expression. There was an immense number of copies of the Herald sold in Brooklyn yesterday morning, and later in the day a premium was offered for the paper, but in vain.

THE VIENNA COMMISSION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-

Your spiendid paper of to-day unwittingly assists in parading as Commissioners to Vienna a number of unauthorized persons who appointed them selves or were appointed by the "General Commisstoner-in-Chief," &c., and to whom we are indebted for the scandal attaching to the American part of the Exposition. The Commissioner-he is not Commissioner General—obtained permission from the State Department to appoint thirteen as sistants or clerks, at $1,200 a head, whose apparent duties have been to wear $70 badges from Tiffany's, announce their arrivals and departures in and from foreign ports, and generally to make themselves ridiculous. The paid Commissioner, throwing himself into the exclusive embrace of the Union League Club, cailed a meeting of the fossils there, who appointed themselves an "advisory committee," and paraded their names in catalogues, circulars and in the papers, arranging themselves in "groups," &c., although they had no official status whatever. They simply succeede in preventing an art exhibition at Vienna, and in being, with two exceptions, rejected by the government in its appointment of honorary comm sioners. These gentlemen, placed under the head of "The New Commissioners" in the HERALD, and apparently connected with them, are, although very worthy persons, in no way connected with the Exposition, have done it more harm than good, and, even if they should go to Vienna, would rank with the town, village, sewing machine and myriads of other "Commissioners" who will receive no recognition whatever and only make their country ridiculous in the eves of foreigners!

ceive no recognition whatever and only make their country ridiculous in the eyes of foreigners!

It is understood that the State Department will soon issue an official order defining the new Commission, which includes Messrs. Roosevelt, Shultz, Aspinwall, Spang and such of the scientists and honorary commissioners who have recently been appointed as have accepted and received their commissions from the government, and upon whom will devolve the duty of bringing order out of chaos.

of General Van Buren. Several days ago a telegram was published—the fact having been obtained from an official sourcegiving the names of eleven gentlemen of the original Vienna Commission who are free from the charge of irregularity. The names of the other three Commissioners who are implicated in the charges of improperly receiving money are William Mayer, Robert Seargeant and A. E. Stiasny, together with Chief Commissioner Van Buren. So far telenent, but the full report is expected in a few days. It is understood all these Commissioners were appointed on the recommendation of General Van Buren, before Congress made an appropriation to defray the expenses attending the American distioned to be particular in the designations-General Van Buren will, however, have a fair opportunity to be heard in reply to whatever charges have been made against him, when, it is hoped, he will be able to establish his innocence. The statement made heretofore that the present action of the Secretary of State against General Van Buren originated in unfriendas these gentlemen had been pleasantly intimate previous to the late scandalous disclosures. Why Minister De Long Was Recalled. It is ascertained that the recall of Minister De Long from Japan was owing to his having repeatedly made presents to the Mikado. On first doing so, the fact coming to the knowledge of this government, he was reminded that under the instructions to our Ministers such proceedings were forbidden, as all presents to a sovereign must be made through his own diplomatic representative; but Minister De Long, instead of desisting, repeated the act, and was again reminded of his nstructions. CARLETON'S

FARM BALLADS. By will Carloton. Illustrated. Square Svo, ornamental cloth, $2.

The publication of this volume is the response to a very soppular Trained for a permanent collection of the popular Trained for a permanent collection of sensis, hit upon a new and wholy unexpired field in American literature; and aithough he has had many followers none have ever displayed in an equal degree those peculiar qualities of thought, feeling and treatment which from the start gave the Train Ballads' a popularity rarely accorded to the productions of an author whose tame is still to be made. They abound in those touches of nature which "make the whole world kin," in guardy are pictures and an author whose tame is still to be made. They abound in those touches of nature which "make the whole world kin," in guardy for universal sympathies. Had Carleton never written anything but "Betsey and I Are Out," that alone would have made his name famous as the author of one of the most pathetic hallads in the English language; but those that followed, in quick succession, displayed great versatility of talent, and showed the author to be a keen and sympathetic observer of life and character. As the general title indicates, the incidents and every secone is strongly individualized.

In the elegant and tasteful form in which these poema are now presented to the public they will meet with a cordial reception by the many thousands who from time to time have welcomed their appearance in the pages of Harper's Housekeeper and the care of ma
